

I Heard You Got a Promotion!

A: So I heard you got a promotion, congrats!

B: Thanks a lot.

A: Hey why aren't you celebrating?

B: Well they want to transfer me to the San Francisco office. That's part of the promotion.

A: Oh wow, yeah the company is spread out all over the country now that it has grown so much. How is your husband going to feel about that?

B: Well his parents are only a few hours away and he told me that he doesn't want to move around too much and that he wants to stay close to them.

A: Oh man. Are you going to take the promotion then?

B: I'm not sure. Actually I like the idea of getting away from my in-laws, but I don't want our kids to grow up far away from their grandparents.

A: Hmm it's a tough decision

B: Also the hours in this job are much tougher. Since I'll be a manager, I'll have to get up and get to work by 7am but after all, they are offering me a 20% pay raise.

A: Hmmm you are in a tough spot. I wish I could help but I don't know what to tell you. Anyways, let me know what you end up doing.

Key Vocabulary Words

1. He doesn't want to move around too much.
2. I like the idea of getting away from my in-laws.
3. I don't want our kids to grow up far away from their grandparents.
4. The company is spread out all over the country
5. I'll have to get up and get to work by 7am.

